BLUE MOLD IS REPORTED

Blue mold's first 1961 appearance in Virginia tobacco has been reported, and growers in the tobacco belt are being urged to start chemical applications — on the double!

S. B. Penne, plant pathologist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute says, blue mold is a disease that can wipe out the tobacco crop if not controlled. Conditions for its spread are ideal right now, and he stresses the importance of doing a good job of control.

Future of Civilization

A British scientist has produced sugar chemically, suggesting that there is the possibility of making all foodstuffs in factories. Then we would all live in cities, and use the country to park our cars.
